Mother could face 60 years for crime spree

Arrested. Woman and her boyfriend committed five robberies over two months last year.

Elizabeth Kenneally was found alive, but her story is still ending in heartbreak.

The 26-year-old mother from Phoenixville, Chester County, who went missing in October, is facing federal charges for her role in five robberies between October and November, according to a federal grand jury indictment filed in Philadelphia this week.

Kenneally was first reported missing on Oct. 15. After family and friends searched the area, she contacted her local newspaper, The Mercury News, claiming she wasn't missing, she just didn't wish to return home.

In early November, police tracked Kenneally and her boyfriend, Christopher LeBlanc, to a Delaware motel. The two were arrested after surveillance video linked the couple to three bank robberies in suburban Philadelphia.

Both Kenneally and LeBlanc, 40, the son of the mayor of Norristown, were charged with felony bank robbery charges, court documents show.

The duo were indicted for stealing engagement rings from two stores in Montgomery County, and then robbing banks in Audubon Township and East Goshen Township in late October.

After the third robbery, a bank in West Goshen Township in early November, the two were caught at a motel in New Castle, Delaware, according to court documents.

The duo, who were supporting a drug habit, made off with two engagement rings and more than $5,000 in cash.

Kenneally, mother of a young boy, could spend up to 60 years behind bars if convicted.

Susan Lynn Puzio Bossley, Kenneally's mother, pleaded on Facebook on Oct. 20 that "my daughter needs help."

"So many families have someone who suffers, whether from drugs, depression, alcoholism, but some may not experience it firsthand and don't understand," she wrote. "Families lives change forever and you live always waiting for the phone to ring. That's how we live ours. Addiction is a lifelong disease."

Elizabeth Kenneally, pictured above and below, is the mother of a small boy. She vanished in October, only to reappear as a suspect in five robberies. If convicted, she could face up to 60 years in jail. / FACEBOOK

Power play. Blatstein buys Fishtown plant

Bart Blatstein made a power move Thursday, agreeing to purchase the former Exelon Corp. electric plant on the Delaware riverfront in Fishtown, reports said.

Blatstein, the developer behind The Piazza at Schmidt's, partnered with caterer Joseph Volpe to buy the huge tract of land, which includes 300,000 square feet of vacant buildings and a 1,000-foot pier, according to The Inquirer.

Volpe told the newspaper that he envisions two boutique hotels, each with its own ballroom. Blatstein said river-view apartments may be added later.

The deal is expected to close in March, according to the newspaper.

Burglars steal ATM, TVs from Old City bar

Two men were caught on surveillance video removing an ATM machine and several flat-screen TVs from an Old City bar, police said.

In the video, which police released Thursday, the men are seen forcing open the front door of Paddy's Old City Pub, at 229 Race Street, at 3:25 a.m. on Monday morning.

The first man is described as a black male with a stocky build and mustache.

Police said he stood approximately 6-feet and is between the ages of 40 and 50.

The second suspect was described as an approximately 40-year-old black male with a thin build standing between 5-foot-7 and 5-foot-9.

Safe. Deportation order lifted for woman who took sanctuary

The deportation order against Honduran immigrant Angela Navarro was lifted Wednesday by the Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) agency.

Navarro, 28, had spent two months taking refuge in a West Kensington church, protesting U.S. immigration laws and her deportation.

"I didn't think that it would happen so quickly, but I'm just so happy right now," said Navarro, through a Spanish translator.

"My life has changed totally," Navarro said. "I'm not afraid anymore. I'm free. I can go to my mom's house where I've been afraid to go before because of the ICE raids. This is a complete change in my life."

Navarro's attorney, Patricia Luber, received a call from ICE on Wednesday night saying the deportation order against Navarro would not be enforced for at least two years.

During this time, Luber will file more legal papers to secure U.S. citizenship for Navarro.

"It's definitely the first step for us as far as reopening her deportation case," Luber said. "Now we can do that with the assurance that while that's pending, her deportation order won't be enforced."

Amnesty

While President Obama's recent executive order on immigration would apply to Navarro, who is married to a U.S. citizen, the order does not take effect until later this year.

- Luber believes the executive order will strengthen Navarro's case once it takes effect.

CCP honors Supreme Court Justice Alito for his 'citizenship'

Honors. Philly's 35,000-student community college welcomed a justice of the U.S. Supreme Court Thursday.

Community College of Philadelphia presented the Judge Edward R. Becker Citizenship Award to U.S. Supreme Court Justice Samuel A. Alito Thursday.

Alito urged attendees to honor the late Judge Becker, a lifelong Philadelphian, by investing their time in public service.

"Good citizenship is not easy. It requires hard work," Alito said. "Ed was the hardest worker of all."

Becker is memorialized in part by "Ed Becker Way" – the 500 block of Chestnut Street between Independence Hall and Liberty Mall, which was barred to pedestrians and vehicles following the 9/11 attacks.

A federal judge who died in 2006, Becker headed the successful effort to reopen the street in 2003.

Alito, a Trenton native and former colleague of Becker's on the Third Circuit, recalled Becker using a Rocky Balboa-esque "Yo!" to summon law clerks in court.

"A lot of people take Community College for granted," said student Indiana Crousett, 24, who attended the ceremony. "It's a pleasure and an honor to have a Supreme Court justice here."

Police in Belgium kill two in raid on suspected Islamists

EU efforts. Belgium has taken a lead to counter the threat perceived from the return of "foreign fighters" from Syria.

Police stand guard in Verviers after two men were killed during an antiterrorist operation. / GETTY IMAGES

Belgian police killed two men who opened fire on them during one of about a dozen raids on Thursday against an Islamist group that federal prosecutors said was about to launch "terrorist attacks on a grand scale."

The incident fueled fears across Europe of young Muslims returning radicalized from Syria. But the Belgian probe had been under way before the Jan. 7 attack on French satirical newspaper Charlie Hebdo and officials saw no obvious link between the two.

A third man was detained in the eastern city of Verviers, where police commandos ran into a hail of gunfire after trying to gain entry to an apartment above a town center bakery. All three were citizens of Belgium, which has one of the biggest concentrations of European Islamists fighting in Syria.

Other raids on the homes of men returned from the civil war there were conducted across the country, prosecutors said, adding that they were suspected of planning attacks on Belgian police stations. Security had been tightened at such sites.

"The searches were carried out as part of an investigation into an operational cell some of whose members had returned from Syria," said prosecutors' spokesman Eric Van Der Sypt. "For the time being, there is no connection with the attacks in Paris."

Earlier in the day, in an apparently unrelated development, police detained a man in southern Belgium whom they suspected of supplying weaponry to Amedy Coulibaly, killer of four people at a Paris Jewish grocery after the Charlie Hebdo attack. REUTERS

Protests against police violence close highway into Boston

Officials. Protesters stop traffic north and south of Boston during the morning rush hour.

Massachusetts State Police on Thursday arrested 29 people who stopped traffic on two sections of a major highway into Boston during the morning rush hour to protest the recent killings by police of unarmed black men.

The protesters in Milton, to the south of the city, chained themselves to concrete barrels on the roadway. "Our nonviolent direct action is meant to expose the reality that Boston is a city where white commuters and students use the city and leave, while black and brown communities are targeted by police, exploited and displaced," organizer Katie Seitz said in a statement.

State police said the protesters prevented an ambulance carrying a crash victim with life-threatening injuries from reaching a trauma center in Boston, and forced it to divert to a smaller hospital outside the city. REUTERS

Quoted

"Numerous other ambulances had to be on-scene while we cut protesters out of restraints, meaning they were not available if needed elsewhere." Police

Tax season. Obamacare will make filing an even bigger headache

The first year will be hard, next year will be easier. / GETTY IMAGES

Tax filing for 2014 opens Jan. 20. The biggest change for most taxpayers is on Line 61 of Form 1040: a box to check if you have health insurance and a tax to pay if you don't. Millions who received insurance through Obamacare's exchanges will have a more complicated set of calculations to complete.

The added strain on taxpayers will increase burdens on the Internal Revenue Service at its busiest time of the year. The IRS is already warning that about half the people who call its toll-free phone lines won't be able to get through.

First, the IRS enforces the requirement that individuals have health insurance, which can be satisfied with an employer-provided plan, a government program such as Medicaid or insurance purchased on the exchanges established under the law.

Failure to have health insurance in 2014 generates a penalty of $95 per person or 1 percent of household income, whichever is greater.

Quoted

"Because it's never happened before, it's a learning experience for everybody."

Roberton Williams of the Tax Policy Center, a research group

The second major intersection between Obamacare and the tax system applies to about 8 million people who purchased policies through the exchanges. About 85 percent of the people who initially enrolled received subsidies, which went directly to insurance companies during 2014.

Those subsidies were typically based on 2012 income and now must be reconciled with the taxpayers' actual 2014 income and household size. Some taxpayers will owe the government money, with caps on the amount they have to repay. Others will get money back. BLOOMBERG

Brazilian booty trick crosses the border

Fitness. The Butt Trainer has designed shaping leggings to show off what your mama gave ya.

The body part of the moment is surely the booty. But one fitness entrepreneur, Boston-based trainer Kelly Brabants, got ahead of the trend two years ago when she launched Booty by Brabants, a 60-minute women-only fitness class.

"I always had a big butt; people would make fun of it when I was younger. So, I've always done exercises that toned the butt," she says. "I became known to people as The Butt Trainer, because I was always doing squats."

This month, the 25-year-old is expanding her booty beauty empire by launching a line of rear-shaping leggings. "My

The moves

Single Leg Russian Deadlift

"A single leg RDL is one of the best glute builders, and also great for balance and core strength. I add weight and do about four sets of 10-12 repetitions on each leg."

Kick one leg back as you hinge at the hips and keep supporting with knee slightly bent. Bring the kettle bell close to the ground making sure your shoulders are back and spine is neutral. Stand up tall, keeping your weight on the supporting leg.

Goblet Squat

"The goblet squat is a great exercise to sculpt the booty and burn fat at the same time. Adding a weight to your squats works your glutes, quads and core, too. I do about five sets of 15-20 repetitions."

Hold a weight against the chest. Position feet a bit wider than shoulder-width with toes pointed slightly out. Hinge your hips and sit back and down, keeping your chest up the entire time. Shoot back up, lift your chest, and squeeze your butt at the top.

Squat Jump

Start from a deep squat. Keeping your arms back, jump and land in a squat with your weight on your heels. Keep knees over the heels and your core engaged throughout the jump. Repeat for about 25-30 seconds.

The leggings, worn here by Kelly Brabants, are available at www.booty-by-brabants.myshopify.com mom brought me a pair of leggings back from one of her trips to Brazil and I got so many compliments – but there was nothing like it available here," she says. "Four months ago I said, 'Mom, we've got to make this happen.' "

Brabants re-engineered the leggings and added her own design touches. The muffin top-reducing high waist creates an hourglass figure, while special ribbing smooths cellulite.

The fabric is breathable for workouts, but the leggings were created to go from morning to night. "I wore mine out to a bar the other night and everyone was like, 'Wow,'" says Brabants.

For the best results though, you'll have to put in the sweat equity. We asked Brabants to share three of her go-to moves.

Kevin Hart and Josh Gad go to the chapel

Video. The "Wedding Ringer" stars talk fancy weddings and on-set animal abuse in our exclusive on-camera chat.

Broadway star Josh Gad shows off his dance moves with Kevin Hart in one of the cleaner moments in the marital/gross-out comedy "The Wedding Ringer." / SCREEN GEMS

If ads for "The Wedding Ringer" are to be believed, Kevin Hart and Josh Gad make for a fun on-screen duo. So we decided to put that to the test. We sat down with Hart and Gad for a video chat about their new film, the crazier weddings they've been to — let's just say that Hart has been going to some very, very fancy weddings — and how far is too far when it comes to comedy. Speaking of going too far, they also offer a heartfelt apology to one of their more used and abused co-stars. (No, it's not Kaley Cuoco-Sweeting.)

Did this bear any resemblance to weddings that you've been to, just in terms of craziness?

JG: I've been to one or two weddings that were a little bit crazy, where things got a little bit out of control. But for the most part I feel like most of the weddings I've been to have actually been really wonderful and amazing.

KH: Yeah, I haven't been to anything with this type of vibe. I hope I don't. I don't want to go to a wedding where I go, "Did she just smack him? Oh God, we've got to chug the champagne." And then it's that awkward exit where everybody's like, "Man … do we take the cake or not? Do we get our gift bags or should we leave them?

Also on Metro.us, check out our exclusive video chat with Kaley Cuoco Sweeting.

Do you often go to weddings with gift bags?

KH: Every wedding I've been to, they gave out, like, a care package to everybody.

JG: Kevin, those are awards shows.

KH: No, those are the weddings I went to.

JG: I'm going to the wrong weddings.

KH: At one wedding we got slippers, with the bride and the groom's last name [on them]. And actually it was an Ugg. True story. That had to be expensive.

A dog's day

When comedy turns into animal abuse

Comedy is a tricky business, but for Hart and Gad, the bigger issue is that sometimes colleagues get hurt, physically or emotionally. They're concerned one of their co-stars — a basset hound, to be exact — paid too high a price for their film's laughs. "When you're doing what we did to a dog, sometimes you're wondering if that's crossing certain lines with PETA where they may retaliate and they may feel upset about what we put canines through," Gad tells us. "This is why dogs need betters unions."

And Hart fully agrees: "The dogs need a union, because Fletcher shouldn't have had to deal with that thing for more than two takes."

Caesars Entertainment chooses Philadelphia to roll out new loyalty program

In today's marketplace, being a loyal customer pays off – especially if you take advantage of rewards programs. And why shouldn't you? With regard to merchants you visit frequently, it makes sense to earn perks while also knocking out the regular purchases you planned on making anyway.

Expanding its loyalty program is Caesars Entertainment. The casino-entertainment giant is broadening its Total Rewards program to reach well past casinos. Shifting gears from only being able to earn Reward Credits at casinos, the expanded program now allows members to earn rewards while doing their everyday shopping in their hometowns.

"By expanding the Total Rewards Marketplace, our members have the opportunity to earn reward credits every day while shopping, eating out, golfing, or going to their hometown spa," says Michael Marino, vice president of customer loyalty for Caesars Entertainment.

In a nutshell, the program thanks its members with an easy way to earn Reward Credits that they can later redeem at any Caesars Entertainment resort or casino. These credits can be redeemed for dining, shopping, entertainment, or hotel stays and amenities.

To get the expansion off the ground, Caesars teamed up with Advantex Marketing International to pilot the program in Memphis. Now it's starting a major market rollout with Philadelphia as the lead city. The partnership allows members to earn rewards at a wide variety of local merchants. The nuts and bolts of the program couldn't be simpler. (All members have to do is swipe their Total Rewards card while checking out at participating retail locations.)

"For participating merchants, it's a cost-effective way to market to our plus 1.4 million members in greater Philadelphia," says Phil McGlynn, general manager of the initiative. "At the same time, it gives their customers the value-added bonus of earning Total Reward credits with their purchases."

According to AC Nielsen, over 60 percent of U.S. households say that loyalty card programs are important in their shopping decisions. Another Total Research Corp study also found that 28 percent of customers are "extremely likely" to increase their visits to a business if they have a loyalty reward card program in place.

Poor Josh Gad has to play second fiddle, not co-lead, to Kevin Hart in "The Wedding Ringer." / SCREEN GEMS

Kevin Hart movie. The comedian is once again hired to salvage a movie well beneath his talents

Review

'The Wedding Ringer'

Director: Jeremy Garelick

Stars: Kevin Hart, Josh Gad

Rating: R

The Kevin Hart movie express continues, this time with the comic playing a guy who poses, for an exorbitant fee, as the best man of grooms-to-be who can't find one. His latest client (Josh Gad) not only needs him but an entire flock of groomsmen.

The lowdown: Kevin Hart is a big movie star, but that doesn't mean movies have figured out how to use him. So far he's been a fixer, parachuting into projects beneath his talents and pounding them — with motor-mouthed ad-libbing, shouting and copious short jokes — into semi-charming shape. What he does in movies isn't far from what his character in "The Wedding Ringer" does. But "The Wedding Ringer" is almost a real movie. Before it became a Kevin Hart movie, it was an Owen Wilson-Vince Vaughn buddy comedy, made by the guys who wrote "The Break-Up." Now the scales are tipped in Hart's favor; early on his paid poser tells his screen partner, "You follow my lead and say as little as you can."

Gad does slightly more than that, but it's still The Kevin Hart Show, despite more meat to the script than, say, "Ride Along." There are jokes that were actually in the screenplay, though it's telling that the supporting roles — including seven differently questionable groomsmen — are all played by nobodies. No one can upstage the star, or come close. Still, Hart's not responsible for what a tonal and confused wreck "The Wedding Ringer" can be. It tries to be everything: It's a dumb comedy that's also cynical about marriage and weddings; it has gay panic jokes and gay power jokes; it can be brutally honest and feature a set piece involving a dog, peanut butter and a fake schlong. Worst, it's a pumped-up Kevin Hart movie that also features sincere heart-to-heart (or Hart) scenes. The comic isn't ready yet to act sad against sad music. Still, at least there's only one short joke.

Cyber thriller.
'Blackhat' is the most abstract version of an action movie Michael Mann has made yet

The latest from Michael Mann ("Heat," "Collateral") finds a curiously buff super-hacker (Chris Hemsworth) freed from prison to help American and Chinese agents (among them Viola Davis and "Lust, Caution"'s Wei Tang) track down mysterious cyber crooks.

The lowdown: Released into a climate thick with fears over hacking, Mann's latest is actually not a film of the moment but one unstuck in time. It is, as it were, a Michael Mann film: old school macho, old school semi-sexist and shot on an archaic video stock that looks fuzzy and digital at a time when video can now look just like film. Hemsworth's badass character is a classic Mann hero: mumbly, anguished, well-dressed (albeit here in tight tees, not designer suits) and consumed with his questionable job. Don't bother trying to follow the plot, which is thick with gobbledygook delivered by unknowable types, not characters. Everything about "Blackhat" seems designed to frustrate those who came to the movies for a good, dumb time.

And yet those who like what Mann is doing here will leave floating on air. Once a cutting edge populist, he began stripping down his thrillers to see what was left on the bone. He executive produced the show "Miami Vice," the height of style as substance; by the time he helmed the 2006 movie version, he was ready to turn a name franchise into a reductio ad absurdum of the action movie: all minimalist form, with characters to match.

"Blackhat" goes even farther down the rabbit hole. It doesn't matter what's specifically going on; what matters is that it captures a sickening mood of unease, confusion and borders that have been torn down, not only between counties, like America and China, but between real life and cyberspace. The best joke in this admirably humorless film is that it's concerned with online life and yet is filled with brutal body-to-body contact: beat downs, shootouts and, in the end, some peerless knife fights. Ignore the story; the real meat is elsewhere. MATT PRIGGE

Bradley Cooper takes on the role of noted sharpshooter Chris Kyle in "American Sniper." / WARNER BROS. PICTURES

'American Sniper'

The memoirs of late army sharpshooter Chris Kyle come to the screen courtesy of Clint Eastwood, with Bradley Cooper as a good ol' boy who winds up raking in record kills in the aftermath of 9/11 — which takes a toll on his marriage and his psyche.

The lowdown: Eastwood has spent much of his career deconstructing his on-screen persona and all the questionable business it represents. This makes him the perfect person to direct "American Sniper."

This is a deeply conflicted film — not jingoistic crap about badass Americans bagging Muslims, but an ambivalent look at war on the order of Eastwood's "Flags of Our Fathers" and "Letters from Iwo Jima."

On one hand, it's a celebration of the troops. But on the other, that's not the same as celebrating war, and it's definitely not the same as being an uncritical look at what battle does to those who fight in them.

Like Eastwood's own "The Hurt Locker," it offers complex battles that rev up audience bloodlust — only to deny anyone the pleasure of clean kills.

Picking off terrorists (and women and children) does awful things to Cooper's increasingly remote (though in real life more gung ho) Kyle, and the film never once lets you forget it. MATT PRIGGE

Why your date never

Dear Charles:
I met this guy and we had a GREAT time on our first few dates. I thought we had a real connection. I know, I know. Not that fast, but we were really into things. And no, I didn't sleep with him. We both wanted to, and then we both decided to wait. Then — POOF! He vanished! No calls. No return emails. No texts. Nothing! I was so confused!! What gives with this guy? How can I see the signs of this in the future?
—Amanda

He might be doing you a favor by not calling you back. / ISTOCK

Hi Amanda:
The first few dates offer you a glimpse of who the person is, but you don't really know them; you just have an impression, and they have one of you. There's no telling what was going on behind the scenes for him: He could be going on multiple dates with multiple people, or be just out of a relationship, or have family issues. There's no knowing.

The fact that he didn't get back in touch after putting in the beginnings of an effort, however, is a red flag. If he's going to say one thing and then do another, it sounds like he's done you a favor by dropping back. After all, it just takes a moment to communicate if something has changed.

In today's technology-centric world, many people think they "know" someone just because they have had a few conversations (and read their profile, and Googled them, etc.). But the truth is this: getting to really know someone takes time.

The best thing to do in the future is to manage your own expectations. Recognize that you are both getting to know each other.

The bottom line is very straightforward. First, someone who disappears without a trace is doing you a favor. If they can leave so easily that early, they either have their own stuff going on (perhaps from their past, which you can't solve), or they weren't really into you in the first place.

But remember, If they do vanish, that isn't a reflection on YOU or your own worthiness of love. They could have called and wrapped things up in a respectful manner. Maybe they had an emergency. Maybe they didn't feel the connection. Maybe a million things, but that is all about THEM. YOU are still worthy — and sometimes the universe takes away what you think you want to make room for what you actually deserve.

Nicki Minaj cries a lot in new documentary

There's a whole lot more to Nicki Minaj than having the most infamous backside in music. (What! Don't tell us the 39 million people who watched that "Anaconda" music video just like the song.) Minaj shows a raw, emotional side of herself in her new MTV documentary, "My Time Again," premiering Sunday at 10 p.m. Filmed while she was working on "The Pinkprint," Minaj talks about ending an 11-year relationship and the pressure of having every day for months on end booked, leaving little time for anything else. She also reveals more information about her abortion and shares her thoughts on motherhood now. But this being Nicki Minaj, it's not all tears. Perhaps the most entertaining part is a behind-the-scenes look at that infamous VMA wardrobe malfunction. Tune in to find out what Beyonce told Minaj about that moment, and to witness her convo with Katy Perry shortly after it happened.

"ONE OF THE MOST POWERFUL FILMS OF THE YEAR.

A reminder of what Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. did for this country. David Oyelowo is magnificent. He reveals the King who is not in our history books – his humor, his human failings, and his self-doubt. Director Ava DuVernay brilliantly uses a micro event as a way into a larger, more compelling macro story. 'Selma' arrives with a raw-nerve urgency and timeliness that no one could have anticipated."

Letters to the editor

Freedom of religion has its limits

Re: 'Burqa ban not against religion' (Metro, Jan. 15) Letter writer B. Miluski claims burqa bans don't violate freedom of religion. That claim is wrong (only a strict textualist would argue that the rules of a religion come solely from its holy book), but is that really such a bad thing? The Quran quite explicitly demands the murder of apostates, yet the freedom of religion defense will hardly hold up in trial. Jesus demands that Christians abandon their families to follow him, but the freedom of religion defense will not hold up against a child support claim. Freedom of religion must be infringed when the alternative causes harm to others.
SCOTT PERRY, VIA EMAIL

Veil is required

Re: 'Burqa ban not against religion' (Metro, Jan. 15) The Quran states in Chapter 33 Verse 59: "O Prophet! Tell your wives, your daughters and women of the believers that (while going out of their houses) they should draw lower upon themselves the portions of their (loose) outer covering from over their hands on to their bosom (so as to veil therewith the head, arm, neck, hair and ornaments worn over them). This is a requirement for ALL Muslim women to protect themselves from being looked at in a sexual or desired way.

A CONGRESS FULL OF KLINGONS

Opinion

TOM FOREMAN
POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT FOR CNN

"Cry havoc, they're here!"

That's what I imagine the private reaction was from White House staffers this week as leaders of the new Republican-led Congress came calling. From their expressions, you'd have thought a D7 battle cruiser had drifted in from space, landed on the South Lawn, and disgorged Klingons into the Rose Garden. Sitting stiffly between John Boehner and Mitch McConnell, President Obama looked like he was inwardly saying, "Beam me up, Scotty."

Outwardly, both sides were "talking the talk" of better relations. The president spoke about common ground, cooperation, and areas of mutual agreement. The GOPers politely listened, and used the term "bipartisan" a lot. All displayed at least passing interest in finding some areas of agreement; maybe on tax reform, or fighting terrorism, or outlawing mimes. Things like that.

But as soon as the coffee cups were collected and the muffin crumbs swept, it was back to shields up, photon torpedoes armed. The president's press secretary cautioned against any expectation of a breakthrough, and the Repubs fired up their phasers to escort legislation through the Capitol that the president has already promised to veto. Indeed, the very next day the House voted to defund any effort to carry out the executive action on immigration.

In many ways, for quite some time now the parties have seemed to come from different planets, speaking in grunts and clicks that their opponents simply can't understand. And as much as partisans like to think otherwise, neither side can honestly make a clean claim to being the "good guys" in the galaxy. In fairness, if both parties were truly committed to solutions above political positioning, I suspect they could easily find ways to cooperate on key issues like improving wages, ensuring security, and making sure America is an international leader in technology, education, and quality of life.

And who knows? Maybe even in D.C. that's not just wishing on a star. If only both parties will consider the words of Captain Picard: "Things are only impossible, until they're not."

Horoscope

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan. 20. Be a participant, not a spectator. Find a venue that grabs your attention and enjoy what it offers. Rewarding friendships and social connections will result.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb. 18. Dealing with institutions or authority figures will be problematic. Get your documents in order before you face any red tape.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20. Re-evaluate your past actions; if you have been neglecting your personal or professional responsibilities, do whatever it takes to make amends. You will face complaints if you haven't been pulling your weight.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20. Disagreeing colleagues will ask for your opinion. Diplomacy will be needed in order to avoid being blamed by people who think you are meddling.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21. Elderly relatives will call on you for assistance with financial or personal matters. Do what you can, but plan to take a little time to do something nice for yourself.

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20. Potential partners can be found in many places. An educational or business function could provide an introduction to someone who will have a positive influence on you.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22. Eliminate thoughts or habits that impede your progress. Keep your mind on your future, and don't fritter away your hard-earned cash on frivolous purchases.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22. Don't feel that you speak for everyone. Give others the opportunity to provide input regarding events or decisions that involve a group. Taking a back seat will give you perspective.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Deal with legal, financial or time-sensitive documents in order to put your mind at ease. Go through items you have collected over the years that are outdated or no longer needed.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22. You will have the ability to defuse an argument today. Keeping the peace will be your reward for being able to see both sides of the situation.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21. Make someone you love the center of attention. An offering of a small gift or setting aside time to discuss plans for the future will bring you closer.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21. Improvise a social evening with friends or relatives. A game or contest will add a challenge to your life that will enable you to show off your competitive, playful nature. EUGENIA LAST

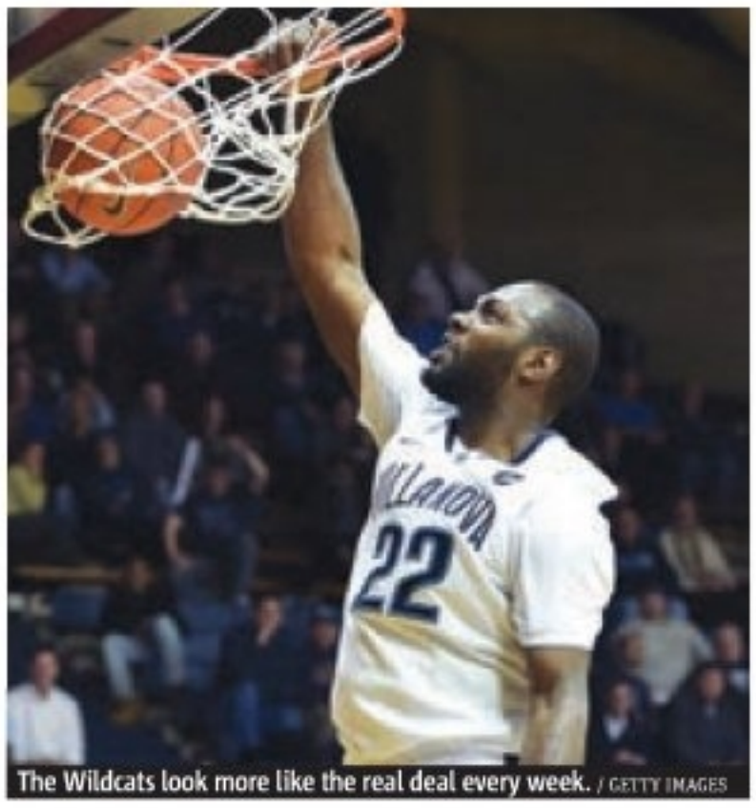
76ers host Pelicans

The 76ers predictably fell back to earth in Toronto on Wednesday, missing an opportunity to win their third straight vs. one of the NBA's best teams. They'll have an easier time getting back in the win column against the 19-19 New Orleans Pelicans, at 7 p.m. on CSN Friday.

Xavier coach: Villanova Final Four quality

NCAA. The Wildcats are making believers all across the college hoops nation.



The Wildcats look more like the real deal every week. / GETTY IMAGES

You've heard Jay Wright and his players continuously preach all season that it doesn't matter who scores or gets the glory, as long as the end result is a Villanova victory. That's been a winning formula 16 of the 17 times his fifth-ranked Wildcats have taken the court.

It's one thing for them to say it. But listen to the words of their latest victims.

"To be very honest, Villanova is a better team right now," said Xavier coach Chris Mack, whose typically potent offense fell short Wednesday, 88-75. "Not to put any pressure on Jay, but he's got a Final Four-quality team. They have juniors and seniors, and they're terrific. They're experienced. They're selfless."

Mack's plan was to shut down 'Nova big men JayVaughn Pinkston and Daniel Ochefu inside, seeing how they often set the tone for the Wildcats. That part worked, as Pinkston and Ochefu managed just 12 and six points respectively, while pulling down nine combined rebounds.

The problem was that it left guards Dylan Ennis and Ryan Arcidiacono, along with sixth man Josh Hart free to bomb away from long range, as the Wildcats knocked down 15 of 34 from beyond the arc to foil the Musketeers' strategy.

"Coming into the game JayVaughn and Ochefu were like tag-team wrestlers," explained Mack. "They do a great job playing off one another, so we felt a big key to the game was not allowing those two to do much damage. Maybe we paid too much attention to those guys."

Arcidiacono (18 points) Ennis (17) and Hart (15) made the Musketeers pay, as Villanova's precision passing game resulted in 24 assists on 28 field goals.

"It's pretty rare you feel this way," Mack said. "I was an assistant in the ACC and there were a couple of times we matched up with a team called Duke, where I felt like walking off at halftime. That's not to say teams can't knock off 'Nova, but tonight they played at a really, really high level."

Jay Wright and the rest of his selfless Wildcats head to the Palestra Saturday to play Penn with a chance to wrap up the Big 5 title.

NCAA. Cummings may be small, but he plays big role for Owls

Sometimes in basketball, not having the smallest man on the court can be devastating to a team. The Owls (12-6) are realizing what that feeling's like, falling to SMU (13-4), 60-55, Wednesday with their 6-foot-2 senior captain Will Cummings visibly not himself the court.

Cummings scored just one point in 27 minutes of action. He also added five assists and two steals. He suffered a strained muscle in his lower left leg, which forced him to leave Saturday's 63-56 loss to Tulsa and limited his usually explosive play against the Mustangs.

"I think he tried his best to give his maximum effort," Temple coach Fran Dunphy said of Cummings on Wednesday. "He's probably not going to be as explosive as he normally is without rest. Hopefully we'll get a couple minutes out of him on the practice court on Friday. But, he did a pretty good job on the defensive end tonight."

Cummings left Saturday's game against Tulsa with the Owls up by 11. Then, the Golden Hurricane went on a 19-1 run to sink the Owls.

Cummings leads the team in assists (3.9) per game and is second on the team in points (13.6), rebounds (4.7) and steals (1.6). Even at 50 percent, having him back on the court Wednesday meant a lot to his teammates.

"He wasn't himself, but he did a great job as a leader," Jesse Morgan said. "He came out and showed us his courage and who he is as a person. He played through it and we look up to him."

Temple hopes to have Cummings at full strength Saturday against Cincinnati. They'll need all the offense they can get as the Bearcats rank sixth in the country in points allowed, giving up just 54.7 per game.

"It's a hard stretch," Dunphy said. "Obviously SMU's good and Cincinnati will be like trying to get blood from a stone in trying to score against those guys. We're going to really have to manage that game, but that's the challenge."

Saturday's game against Cincinnati will air at 7:30 p.m. on ESPNU.

Super Bowl match to be determined

NFL playoffs.
Rodgers vs. Sherman and Luck vs. Brady are the marquee matchups on Sunday.

The Aaron Rodgers-Richard Sherman battle will be the game within Sunday's NFC Championship Game between the Packers and Seahawks.

An MVP candidate, Rodgers threw for 4,381 yards and 38 touchdowns in the regular season, while Sherman had four interceptions and eight passes defended.

"You have a ton of respect for him," Rodgers said. "Look at the numbers, they don't lie. Not a lot of guys catch passes on his side [of the field], and for the amount of times he's targeted, his interception totals are very impressive."

The play of Rodgers and Sherman coincides with the dominant performances of their respective units. Seattle had the league's best defense, ranked first in total yards allowed per game (267.1) and passing yards allowed (185.6), while ranking third with 81.5 rushing yards.

Sunday night, two more pre-eminent franchises will meet in the AFC title game. The game will mark the fifth time both teams will collide in the playoffs. While Super Bowl appearances are old hat for the Patriots, this is new terrain for the Andrew Luck-era Colts. Luck threw for 4,761 yards and 40 touchdowns in the regular season, and added 641 yards and three touchdowns in the playoffs.

Quoted

"In my mind, he's the MVP."

Richard Sherman, speaking about Aaron Rodgers in an interview with MMQB.

"He [has] a lot of strengths," Pats coach Bill Belichick said. "No weaknesses. He's got a great future in front of him. He's already done a lot in the time that he's been in the league, and I'm sure by the time he gets done he can pass a lot of guys by."

Still, in order for the Colts to advance the Super Bowl, Luck must beat Belichick and Tom Brady.

"Hey, the harder the better," Luck told reporters.
